Item 5. Other Events and Required FD Disclosure

In connection with the secondary offering of Seagate Common Shares consummated in July 2003, we, our controlling shareholder, New SAC, and our executive officers and directors entered into certain lock-up arrangements. The 90-day lock-up restriction that applied to Seagate and our executive officers and directors expires in accordance with its terms on October 22, 2003. With the expiration of the 90-day lock-up, our executive officers will have approximately 4.3 million shares eligible for sale. Under recently issued NASD and NYSE rules, due to the expiration of the 90-day lock-up, the managing underwriters from the July offering are prohibited from publishing research or offering an opinion on our securities in a public appearance until November 7, 2003.

Also, pursuant to our Shareholders Agreement among New SAC and certain members of our management, the ability of Stephen J. Luczo, our chief executive officer, William D. Watkins, our president and chief operating officer, and Charles C. Pope, our executive vice president and chief financial officer, to transfer any Seagate Common Shares that they acquired through the exercise of employee stock options was restricted prior to the July offering. In connection with the consummation of the July offering, however, the restrictions under the Shareholders Agreement on the ability of Stephen J. Luczo, William D. Watkins and Charles C. Pope to sell Seagate Common Shares expired. With the expiration of the 90-day lock-up period described above, these officers are not subject to contractual restrictions with respect to sales of Seagate Common Stock.

In addition, on October 21, 2003, Morgan Stanley, as representative of the underwriters in the July offering, agreed to modify the 180-day lock-up applicable to New SAC to permit the sale by New SAC of up to 16 million Seagate Common Shares before expiration of the lock-up on January 20, 2004.

Separately, we announced that we have recently received from the Securities and Exchange Commission a request for all research analyst reports regarding Seagate Technology published during the period commencing January 1, 2000 through August 30, 2003. We are cooperating fully with this investigation.
