AMR-US Airways Merger Community Benefits Talking Points

I wanted to update you with some exciting news about our company.

Today American Airlines and US Airways announced that the two companies will combine to create the new American Airlines – a premier global carrier.

The new American Airlines will be a stronger, more competitive airline that will benefit consumers, workers and local communities alike. The result for consumers is that we will be a highly competitive alternative to other global carriers.

The combined company will retain the iconic, globally recognized American Airlines brand and will have the scale, breadth and capabilities to compete more effectively and profitably in the global marketplace.

The unions for both airlines are supporting this merger because they understand the benefit of working for an airline that is better positioned to compete in today's industry.

The new airline is committed to being a good community partner in its hubs across the country.

What an American Airlines-US Airways Merger Means for Your Community

The new American Airlines will strengthen communities nationwide through better service, travel to more destinations and enhanced economic and job opportunities over the long term.

Together, American Airlines and US Airways serve more than 187 million passengers a year and employ more than 100,000 people.

Edgar Filing: US AIRWAYS GROUP INC - Form 425

The combined airline will offer more than 6,700 daily flights to 336 destinations in 56 countries around the world, including 221 destinations and 691 routes in its domestic network.

The combined company expects to:

Maintain current hubs of both American Airlines and US Airways, resulting in more choices for customers;

Expand service from those hubs to offer increased service to existing markets and service to new cities;

Provide the most service in the East Coast and Central regions of the U.S., including the East Coast shuttle, enhancing the combined carrier's competitive position;

Expand its presence and further strengthen the network in the West Coast.

American Airlines and US Airways Combination is Good for Consumers

The airline industry will remain highly competitive and consumers will continue to have robust choices from a wide variety of other carriers.

The airline will be a member of the oneworld Alliance, and the merger will improve oneworld's ability to compete with Star Alliance and Skyteam while providing consumers with more options for travel and benefits domestically and internationally.

An American-US Airways merger has comparable and in some cases fewer flights that overlap than those of the recent United-Continental, Southwest-AirTran and Delta-Northwest mergers, all of which were cleared by regulators.

How Employees of Both Airlines Benefit from the Merger

As evidence of the widespread employee support for the transaction all three unions representing American Airlines employees have agreed to term sheets governing collective bargaining agreements.

Unions representing American Airlines pilots, flight attendants and ground employees, as well as the union representing US Airways pilots, have agreed to terms for improved collective bargaining agreements effective upon the closing of the merger.

In addition, the union representing US Airways flight attendants has reached a tentative agreement which includes support for the merger.

American's unions representing pilots and flight attendants are working with their US Airways counterparts to determine representation and single agreement protocols.

In addition to the path to improved compensation and benefits, the combination will provide a stable financial foundation, which will create greater opportunities for employees over the long term.

The new airline will be headquartered in Dallas-Fort Worth and will maintain a significant corporate and operational presence in Phoenix.

Tom Horton, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of American Airlines, will serve as Chairman of the combined company's Board of Directors through its first annual meeting of shareholders, and will also serve as the Company's representative to the oneworld Alliance, of which he is currently chairman, and International Air Transport Association for the same duration.

Doug Parker, Chairman and CEO of US Airways, will serve as Chief Executive Officer and a member of the Board of Directors. Mr. Parker will assume the additional position of Chairman of the Board following the conclusion of Mr. Horton's service.

Next Steps

The combination must be approved by the bankruptcy court, and is subject to regulatory review and approval and customary closing conditions.

The combination is expected to be completed in the third quarter of 2013.

Until the merger is complete, American Airlines and US Airways will remain independent, and it will be business as usual at both airlines.

We will stay in touch as the process moves forward, but don't hesitate to reach out if you or your staff have any additional questions.

Additionally, I encourage you to visit our new joint website, www.newAmericanarriving.com, where you will find additional information and resources about the combination and the many benefits that this transaction has to offer to the stakeholders of both American Airlines and US Airways.
