Additional information regarding the interests of those participants and other persons who may be deemed participants in the transaction may be obtained by reading the Proxy Statement/Prospectus regarding the proposed merger. Free copies of this document may be obtained as described in the preceding paragraph.

Lynell Walton, Old National Bancorp, SVP, Investor Relations Director:

On another note, I'm sure all of you saw our 8-K filed last week in which we announced the regulatory approval of our most recent partnership with Anchor Bancorp in Minnesota. Pending shareholder approval and other customary closing conditions, we should be set to close on this deal on November 1.

Jim Ryan, Old National Bancorp Senior EVP and Chief Financial Officer:

As we look forward to the 4th quarter, we anticipate pre-tax charges of $16 million related to our Anchor Bank partnership,

Bob Jones, Old National Bancorp Chairman and CEO:

I will begin my comments on a more positive note by highlighting the overall themes for our quarter and adding additional color about our Minnesota partnership.

As I turn to our discussion about Minnesota, I will start by apologizing for what we know will be a noisy 4th quarter for us. The combination of the accelerated close of Minnesota, potential charges associated with our client experience project, branch termination charges and the amortization of our tax credit expense will somewhat mask our operational earnings.

We were very pleased that we will be able to close on Minnesota on November 1, just 85 days post announcement. This reflects our board's commitment to our risk profile and the excellent track record my associates have with prior partnerships.

While our conversion is still scheduled for the 2nd quarter, we have already made considerable progress on the cultural integration. The leadership in Minnesota, led by Jeff Hawkins, has been incredible. While change is never easy, morale amongst our associates in the Twin Cities and Mankato is strong and their focus on serving the clients has been excellent. To date, our retention of key individuals has been outstanding with no key departures to date. Again, a true compliment to Jeff and his team.

Earnings have been consistent with what we have modeled and we do not expect any changes to the what we told you back in August with 2018 accretion prior to one-time charges of approximately .08/share. For the balance of 2017 we would expect the contribution to be approximately $3 million dollars. Just a reminder, we will be issuing approximately 16.5 million shares in conjunction with the close.

Loan growth for Minnesota through the end of the third quarter has been 8% as compared to last year. Core deposits have seen similar growth.

We still expect 36% or $20 million in cost savings with the partnership, with about 75% happening in 2018 and fully realized in 2019.

Questions & Answers:

Q: Chris McGratty, KBW

Just a question on the balance sheet. You commented about what you're doing previously in the indirect book, but as you're kind of putting two companies together in the quarter, how should we be thinking about any repositioning of either your or their investment portfolios?... the size of the balance sheet? Any kind of adjustments that typically come in kind of a noisy quarter?

A: Bob Jones

I don't know that you'll see much adjustment in the balance sheet, Chris. As we obviously are not going to do the conversion until the second quarter, we'll have to run them as a separate entity and will continue to do the balance remix on what we call the legacy portfolio on a go-forward basis. So, I don't know that you'll see much different in what we bring in from Minnesota.

Q: Jon Arfstrom, RBC Capital Markets

A couple of questions on the pipeline. I know you had a very strong pipeline last quarter and you touched on it a bit, but is the activity consistent or have things changed, slowed down a bit? It looks like it from the numbers, but I think your commentary suggests otherwise. Could you maybe go into a little more detail on that?

A: Bob Jones

I might add, Jon, just a little bit of color around our Minnesota folks. They report a pipeline that's probably amongst the highest it's been in the history of their company and as they begin to talk to clients, they want the value of our expanded balance sheet and some of the other opportunities. So, we continue to be encouraged by the activity in Minnesota as well.

Q: Terry McEvoy, Stephens

And then the last question I have as I look at my model for 2018, what could really offset the success you're having on the cost saves and the accretion from the deals? Simply the provision line? I'm just wondering, will there be any reserve built for Anchor loans if they just go from marks and then they're re-underwritten and then moved into kind of the non-acquired portfolio? What type of reserves and provisions have you had to take on past deals and do you think that creates any headwind as it relates to the provision line in 2018?

A: Daryl Moore:

Hey Terry, this is Daryl. We're not anticipating any provision build associated with these. We think we've got them marked appropriately and as we manage them going forward, historically we've not seen that as an issue. Just given the culture and the credit up in Minnesota, I don't see any change to that at all.

Q: David Long, Raymond James

Question related to the branch consolidation. When you think about opportunities going forward, excluding the Anchor transaction, anymore thoughts as to will we see more closings or rationalization in the back half of 2018 after the integration is completed there with Anchor?

A: Bob Jones

It's safe to say that we will continue to look at our branch franchise. Whether there would be any in Minnesota, I think that's to be determined. Right now, we think they have a terrific franchise, but as we continue to look at the balance of our franchise, Jim does a great job looking at that bottom 10%... I'll publicly say that I'd be disappointed if we didn't have more closures in '18.

Q: Andy Stapp, Hilliard Lyons

Capital Market fees were down quite a bit. Is there any color you can provide to help us in modeling this line item going forward?

A: Bob Jones

you know that's a fairly immature business for us and you know you're going to have erratic earnings as you build up the ability and some of that is linked to the larger deals. So, I'm not even sure I can give you a run rate for '18 other than to say Chris is doing an excellent job, and we would hope to get to that third or second quarter number and build from there. But you know I might be able to give you a little more color after the fourth quarter. We're really optimistic about our opportunities up in Minnesota because they tend to have clients that use that type of product more so than what we have throughout our franchise. So, we apologize for the little bit of lumpiness, but again, it's a fairly immature business.

Q: Nathan Race, Piper Jaffray Companies:

and just to confirm, the conversion with Anchor is still scheduled for 2Q, despite the earlier closing?

A: Bob Jones

Yes, as we said on our August call, we've got two major technology projects, one involving our mortgage system and the other one the EMV card conversion. So, our desire is to not put our new clients up in Minnesota through two painful processes, we'll just put them through one.
