The following communication was made available by Marcelo Claire, Executive Chairman of Sprint, on Twitter:

Tweet: Retweet @ John Legere This week, I shared the ways New T-Mobile will benefit the US with members of Congress. These are important messages for everyone to understand! The merger would allow us to level the field against competitors, generate more jobs, provide better quality at lower prices & more. [video transcribed below] [link to <http://NewTMobile.com>]

The following is a transcript of a video released in connection with the transaction.

Congressman Jim Sensenbrenner, Ranking Member: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like Mr. Legere and Mr. Claire to say what can consumers expect out of this?

John J. Legere: Thank you, sir. The transaction will provide a 5G network capability that the United States desperately needs. Prices are going down. It's in my business plan. It's also promised in the commitments that I made to the FCC. 96% of rural America will be covered by the New T-Mobile network.

Marcelo Claire: It is crazy to say that we're going to fire 30,000 people. Sprint has 28,000 people. Do the math. It's absolutely impossible, No. 1. No. 2, the gentleman to my left, while I appreciate what you're doing, just protecting the American workers, you're contractually obligated to support AT&T, and it's AT&T behind this to try to block this merger because they know what is going to come.

John J. Legere: Comcast added more phone customers in the last year than AT&T and Verizon together. Comcast, Charter, now Altice, there is more than just the three players, but going from two to three makes more sense than just having two.

Congressman Kelly Armstrong: What does it mean for the U.S. to win the race to 5G?

John J. Legere: Thank you very much, sir. The statistics from CTIA suggest that there are three million American jobs at stake with 5G leadership. That being that if we don't retain and take leadership in 5G as we did with 4G, we could lose those jobs. The U.S. is behind China and South Korea in the deployment of 5G.

Marcelo Claure: By mixing two companies because of our unique spectrum position that you're going to create eight times the capacity. We have an economic necessity as part of our business plan to lower prices to fill that capacity, which is going to be eight times what we would have if we were standalone.

John J. Legere: Prices will go down, services will expand, in-home broadband competition will be coming, rural coverage will expand, rural competition will expand, and jobs will go up. So every piece of what is good for consumers happens in this transaction.
