RWE Acquisition Update #6

November 1, 2001

This is an update on the RWE/Thames acquisition for Associates of American Water. Frequent updates will be distributed in the coming weeks via email. They will then be archived, along with other materials, in the "RWE Acquisition Update" database on Lotus Notes.

Frequently Asked Questions

Tell me one more time what changes have been made to the ESOP plan?

Only one thing has changed so far: You can no longer invest your ESOP dividends in the dividend reinvestment and stock purchase plan. This plan was suspended effective September 17, the first business day after the acquisition agreement was reached. Beginning with the November 15, 2001 dividend you will receive your dividends in cash. But you can still contribute to your ESOP account and the Company will continue to match your contributions. However, once the RWE/Thames transaction is complete, American Water stock will no longer be traded and the ESOP program, as it is constructed today, will no longer exist.

Why was the dividend reinvestment and stock purchase plan suspended?

In the agreement, RWE will pay $46 a share for all the American Water common stock outstanding at the time of the signing. If the dividend reinvestment and stock purchase plans were not suspended, the number of outstanding shares would continue to increase, changing the value of the deal.

Of the 23 states where we serve customers, which ones will have to approve the RWE acquisition before it can be completed?

At this time we believe the transaction will have to be approved by at least 14 states: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia. In addition, the states of Hawaii, Iowa, Missouri, Tennessee and Texas will have to be formally notified of the transaction. No action is required at all in the states of Georgia, Indiana, Massachusetts and Michigan.

Acquisition update #6 - page 2

When will we start the regulatory filings process?

We plan to begin filing applications early in December and expect to complete all of the filings by year's end. The regulatory team, made up of representatives from American Water and Thames, will then respond to comments from the commissions as soon as we receive them.

Does the transaction require any Federal approvals?

Under the rules of the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act, the acquisition cannot be completed until the Federal Trade Commission and the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice have been notified of the transaction, and a waiting period has expired or been terminated. We expect to file this notification sometime after the shareholder vote.

Has a date been set for the special shareholder meeting and vote?

Not yet. Before the date can be set, a proxy statement must be completed, filed and approved by the US Securities and Exchange Commission. That document is still being prepared by representatives of American Water, and is being reviewed by RWE and Thames. It is expected that the proxy statement will be filed within the next six weeks, which would enable us to have the special shareholder meeting in January.

Can anyone still buy American Water Works stock on the open market?

Yes. Anyone can buy our common stock until the day the transaction closes.

My neighbors are saying we shouldn't be selling control of our water supply to an international company. Are they right?

During these emotional times for our country, it is not unusual to hear such concerns. But the fact is, the control of our water supplies has never been determined by who owns the water company's stock. Our country's water supplies are controlled by various governmental organizations including the state public utility commissions, river basin authorities and state environmental protection agencies. That's the way it's been and that's the way it's going to be -- no matter who owns American Water Works. Besides, while RWE is headquartered in Germany, it's hardly new to this country. The company and its affiliates employ more than 16,500 people in the U.S. - roughly 10 percent of RWE's global workforce.
