We are pleased to submit to you our report for Cohen & Steers Quality Income Realty Fund for the quarter ended March 31, 2005. The net asset value at that date was $20.00 per common share. The fund's common stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange and its share price can differ from its net asset value; at quarter end, the fund's closing share price on the NYSE was $18.45 per share. The total return, including income, for Cohen & Steers Quality Income Realty Fund and the comparative benchmarks were:

	TOTAL RETURN, QUARTERLY ENDED 3/31/05

The asset mix of the fund at quarter-end consisted of 77.4% REIT common stocks, 21.8% preferred stocks and other fixed-income investments, and 0.8% cash. The preferred allocation provides diversification benefits and helps increase the income potential of the fund.

During the quarter, three monthly dividends of $0.14 per share were paid to common shareholders. In addition, the fund's board of directors declared three monthly dividends of $0.14 per share payable in April, May, and June.

INVESTMENT REVIEW

Over the past several quarters we have focused on the rebound in real estate fundamentals when determining the outlook for real estate stocks. The performance of real estate stocks during the past two years, in our view, demonstrates that the market has come to appreciate the budding turnaround in property occupancies and rents.

- (a) As a closed-end investment company, the price of the fund's New York Stock Exchange-traded shares will be set by market forces and at times may deviate from the net asset value per share of the fund.
  - (b) The NAREIT Equity REIT Index ('Equity REITs') is an unmanaged market-capitalization-weighted index of all tax-qualified Equity REITs listed on the NYSE, AMEX, and the Nasdaq that have 75% or more of their gross invested book assets invested directly or indirectly in the equity ownership of real estate.

- (c) The Morgan Stanley REIT Preferred Index is an unmanaged index of all exchange-traded perpetual preferred securities of equity REITs, weighted by capitalization and considered representative of real estate preferred stock performance.

More recently, however, forces outside the real estate industry have begun to shape the behavior of the REIT and broader markets. Headwinds have started to blow, perhaps not hard enough to endanger the U.S. economic and real estate recoveries, but sufficient enough, we believe, to slow their pace and generate upheaval in some segments of the economy.

The financial press has invoked a laundry list of concerns, including the trade deficit, the federal budget deficit, the over-consuming and financially stretched consumer, a housing bubble and fears of higher long-term interest rates. Our belief is that most of these are not immediately threatening. Our unease rests largely with rising oil prices and with the Federal Reserve's persistent monetary tightening. As the Fed reverses the accommodative monetary stance that returned the economy to a normal growth trajectory, we believe economic growth should moderate until these interest rate increases work their way through the system. The flattening yield curve (short-term and long-term interest rates almost equal) is hinting at this, as it typically does.

REIT share prices have fallen farther than most of the broader equity market indexes, in an abrupt turnaround from last year. Health care, which had a -11.2% total return, was the worst performing property sector in the first quarter -- not surprising given that, unlike most types of real estate, flattish lease terms tend to make this group more interest rate-sensitive. Industrial and mixed office/industrial REITs, returning -10.5% and -9.7%, respectively, were the next worst performing groups. Apparent profit taking in the first quarter made some of the best performing stocks last year the worst performers. Two mall companies, Mills Corporation and Macerich Company, and Maguire Properties, an office REIT, were among the poorest performing stocks in our portfolio, returning -16.1%, -14.2% and -11.6%, respectively. Stock selection in the regional mall and office sectors were the largest detractors from our relative performance.

Self storage was the best performing property type in the quarter with a 0.8% total return. U-Store-It Trust, which returned 1.5%, was one of our best performing stocks. Our strongest investment was Equity Office Properties, which returned 5.2%. Our overweight in the office sector, which returned -3.3%, driven in our view by the sustained recovery in office fundamentals, contributed significantly to our relative performance. The largest contributor to our performance during the quarter was our allocation to REIT preferred stocks. REIT preferreds, 21.8% of the portfolio, were down only slightly in the quarter, significantly exceeding REIT common stocks on a total return basis.

Our view of why REIT share prices declined during the quarter is distinct from popular perception, and hence our outlook for the future is different as well. The conventional wisdom surrounding REITs is that their outperformance compared to the broader markets during the past five years necessitates that they are now overvalued. Additionally, many believe that interest rates are a key determinant of REIT stock prices and that the rise in interest rates will cause REITs to underperform -- despite historical evidence to the contrary. Finally, many fear that a continual rise in interest rates will burst the real estate 'bubble' -- a condition which, we believe, may exist in some overheated single-family housing markets but certainly not among commercial property types.

Our perspective is somewhat different. We believe REITs' substantial outperformance in 2004 resulted in many individuals and institutions being over-allocated to the REIT asset class at the beginning of 2005, precipitating some re-balancing of portfolios away from REITs. Many investors have reduced their REIT holdings, which we believe reflects the dispassionate, disciplined re-allocation by long-time REIT investors. Perhaps a more simple explanation is that, after strong returns, investors merely took profits, in a financial market environment that already was subject to overall poor investor sentiment.

In the meantime, despite this choppy period in the market for REITs, many companies took advantage of expanding acquisition opportunities. We believe that most commercial property types are in recovery in most regions of the U.S., and that REITs, in response, are beginning to expand their portfolios more rapidly. The flow of real estate assets from private hands to public companies has accelerated dramatically in the last quarter. Announcements of billion dollar acquisitions have become routine. However, in contrast to the mid-1990s when REITs made huge volumes of acquisitions and issued large amounts of common stock to pay for them, today's acquisitions appear to be financed largely with lower cost capital. In the first quarter alone, REITs announced purchases of over $10 billion of privately held real estate while raising only $1.3 billion of equity capital. These acquisitions can potentially enhance their growth rates and have increased the scope of property portfolios they control.

INVESTMENT OUTLOOK

Many investors seem to be concerned that we are inevitably headed for a REIT bear market similar to the one that began in 1998. However, in early 1998, real estate fundamentals peaked after accelerating for six years. Buildings were full and a construction boom was underway. Valuations were excessive -- REITs traded at a 25% premium to the value of their underlying real estate assets -- and investor sentiment was positive. None of these conditions exist today, in our view.

We believe that investors may want to consider the environment REITs faced in the 1994 period. The Fed had aggressively raised short-term interest rates from 3% to 5.5% by year-end, removing the accommodative monetary stimulus that had jump-started the economy out of the early-1990s recession. The rate of GDP growth and job growth slowed from white-hot levels to more sustainable levels and the economic expansion was able to sustain itself for another six years as a result. As the stock market began to incorporate expectations for a slowing economy, REIT returns moderated in 1994, to just 3.2% (the S&P 500 returned 1.3% in 1994), after generating average annual total returns of 23% the prior three years. As the economy stabilized after this 'mid-course correction,' REITs went on to generate an average return of 24% annually for the next three years.

While the Fed's current tightening cycle will inevitably cause some dislocations, and while current economic growth may slow somewhat in the near term, we believe we are still at the beginning of a recovery in most real estate markets. REIT earnings growth, in our view, may not accelerate as quickly, near-term, as the economy undergoes this correction, although we believe there will be continued healthy growth. Very little new construction is underway and we believe replacement costs -- the long run determinant of real estate value -- will continue to rise with raw material costs. Vacancy rates have declined while effective rents have risen, a trend that we believe will continue. We therefore expect REITs to enjoy a strong period of internal growth, even without the benefit of new property acquisitions. In addition, we believe profitable acquisition and development opportunities exist for the skilled players who can access inexpensive capital.

By our estimates, REIT stocks are trading at approximately the value of their underlying assets. However, the most recent round of real estate asset sales would suggest that our estimates of asset value might be too low. It seems unusual at this stage in the cycle that REITs should trade at or below asset value, when, as we believe, fundamentals are improving and growth opportunities are plentiful. As a result we believe that REIT investments will continue to deliver competitive total returns.

OUR LEVERAGE STRATEGY
(UNAUDITED)

While we do not attempt to predict what future interest rates will be, it has been our philosophy to utilize interest rate swap transactions to seek to reduce the interest rate risk inherent in our utilization of leverage. Our leverage strategy involves issuing auction market preferred shares (AMPS) to raise additional capital for the fund, with an objective of increasing the net income available for shareholders. As of March 31, 2005, AMPS represented 36% of the fund's managed net assets. Considering that AMPS have variable dividend rates, we seek to lock in the rate on a majority of this additional capital through interest rate swap agreements (where we effectively convert our variable rate obligation to a fixed rate obligation for the term of the swap agreements). Specifically, we have fixed the rate on 65% of our borrowings at an average interest rate of 4.8%, for an average remaining period of 2.6 years (when we first entered into the swaps, the average term was 5 years). By locking in a large portion of our leveraging costs, we have endeavored to adequately protect the dividend-paying ability of the fund, which is one of the reasons the fund has been able to increase its monthly dividend on several occasions. The use of leverage increases the volatility of the fund's net asset value in both up and down markets. However, we believe that locking in a portion of the fund's leveraging costs for the term of the swap agreements partially protects the fund from any impact that an increase in short-term interest rates may have as a result of the use of leverage.

The final tax treatment of these distributions is reported to shareholders on their 1099-DIV forms, which are mailed to shareholders after the close of each fiscal year. The fund has adopted a level rate distribution policy. Under this policy, the fund may pay distributions in excess of the fund's net investment company taxable income and this excess would be a tax-free return of capital distributed from the fund's assets. To the extent this occurs, the fund's shareholders of record will be notified of the estimated amount of capital returned to shareholders for each distribution and this information will also be available at cohenandsteers.com. Distributions of capital decrease the fund's total assets and, therefore, could have the effect of increasing the fund's expense ratio. In
