Subject: UPDATE: Proposed merger with Universal Compression Holdings

Progress continues to be made on several fronts as the proposed merger of Hanover and Universal Compression Holdings moves forward. This process is a lengthy one and several milestones must be reached.

The Core Project Team has been formed and includes five members from each of the respective companies. This joint team oversees the day-to-day process of planning for the merging the two companies, including such tasks as oversight of the company naming process, determination of a potential new corporate headquarters location and the integration of our respective information technology areas.

One of the first tasks is developing a name, logo, company colors, stock ticker symbols and the internet addresses for the proposed new company. The Naming / Branding Task Force, which includes Stephen York and Rick Goins from Hanover and Rich Leong and Brian Roy from Universal, in concert with the Core Project Team has hired a worldwide branding company to develop the new name. We hope to have a new company name and logo by the end of April. The Headquarters Task Force has been formed to begin studying the requirements / necessity of a new company corporate headquarters. This Task Force includes Steve Snider, the President and CEO of the new company; Lee Beckelman, Dave Egbert and Rob Rice of Hanover and Daniel Schlanger and Kelly Battle of Universal. The Information Technology Task Force has been formed to begin studying how to efficiently integrate our respective information technology areas once the merger has been approved. The task force is comprised of Ron Farrow, Kim Nix and Stephen York from Hanover and Michael Anderson, Norm Hagen and Lee Hardin from Universal. In addition to the task forces mentioned, there will be many more to be formed over the coming months. We also expect to have a merger integration consultant hired by mid-April as well.

Thanks to everyone who has contributed questions about the merger via the new MyHanover merger information site, the merger e-mail box (info@hanover-co.com) and at the employee meetings. Our Human Resources, Investor Relations and Corporate Communications teams are reviewing your questions, which number in the hundreds. We will post updated answers as they become available ... but at this early date, our best and most appropriate answer is to work safely and continue to compete. We will continue to update you regularly.
